MUSLIM AND JEWISH LEADERS UNITE TO COMBAT HATRED

Secretary of State John Kerry performed an important public service on May 20 by personally announcing the release of the U.S. State Department's 2012 Report on Religious Freedom, which contains the disturbing findings that anti-Semitism and Islamophobia are on the rise in countries around the world. Bad news is never welcome, yet Secretary Kerry deserves praise for highlighting the dangerous growth of anti-Jewish and anti-Muslim bigotry and for making a compelling case that both Islamophobia and anti-Semitism are closely related pathologies that should be opposed by people of conscience everywhere.

The State Department's linking of anti-Semitism and Islamophobia is not a new development. From early in the Obama Administration, Hannah Rosenthal, former Special Envoy to Monitor and Combat Anti-Semitism, and Farah Pandith, the Special Representative to Muslim Communities, made frequent joint public appearances to show that Jews care about Islamophobia and Muslims about anti-Semitism.

The State Department's sobering report makes clear why it is that despite disagreements on aspects of the Middle East conflict, Jews and Muslims need to stand united against Islamophobia, anti-Semitism and other forms of bigotry. The report showed that anti-Semitism is increasing in the Middle East and parts of Europe and South America, while anti-Muslim bigotry is growing across Europe and parts of Asia. It showcased notorious expressions of anti-Semitism by government officials and religious leaders, particularly in Venezuela, Egypt and Iran, while noting the rise of anti-Semitic xenophobic movements in European countries like Hungary, Greece and Ukraine. It also showed that anti-Muslim mass movements are growing in European and East Asian countries, and that some countries have placed onerous restrictions on freedom of expression by Muslims such as banning the wearing of headscarves and the building of minarets.

"Holocaust denial and glorification remained troubling themes, and opposition to Israeli policy at times was used to promote or justify blatant anti-Semitism," the report said. "When political leaders condoned anti-Semitism, it set the tone for its persistence and growth in countries around the world."

"Holocaust denial and glorification remained troubling themes, and opposition to Israeli policy at times was used to promote or justify blatant anti-Semitism," the report said. "When political leaders condoned anti-Semitism, it set the tone for its persistence and growth in countries around the world."

On the issue of Islamophobia the report specified: "Government restrictions, which often coincided with societal animosity, resulted in anti-Muslim actions that affected everyday life for numerous believers. The impact ranged from education, to employment, to personal safety within communities."

This week, June 4-5, The Foundation for Ethnic Understanding and the Islamic Society of North America will co-sponsor a Mission to Washington of Muslim and Jewish Leaders from South Africa, Australia and New Zealand. The Mission is expected to be especially transformative for South Africa; opening lines of communication between key Muslim and Jewish leaders in a country where there has been a complete breakdown of relations between the two communities.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END OF CONSTANTINOPLE

Niki GAMM

April 6, 1453, was the official date for the beginning of the siege of Constantinople, 560 years ago, but Sultan Mehmed II had started planning for the occasion long before, perhaps even before he ascended the throne. One wouldn't know it from the notebook in which the young boy wrote and drew, although it is quite extraordinary that we have such a personal memento. (The 1453 Panorama Museum has a display of the notebook.) We can surmise the young boy was fixated with the idea, however.

Hundreds of neo-Nazis march through Athens to commemorate 'fall of Constantinople'

Hundreds of Greek neo-Nazis marched with torches through the streets of Athens late Wednesday to commemorate the 450th anniversary of the "fall of Constantinople."

The militants from the ultranationalist Golden Dawn party shouted "Blood, honour, Golden Dawn" and "Greece belongs to the Greeks." After several fiery speeches against the Turks and communists in the square outside Athens cathedral, they marched on parliament, where the party has held 18 seats since January.

ERDOGAN NENNT CHRISTLICHES BYZANZ "DUNKLES KAPITEL"

- Erst die Osmanen hätte das "Zeitalter der Erleuchtung" eingeleitet, sagt der türkische Premier anlässlich des Jahrestags der Eroberung von Byzanz.
- "Auch heute schreiben wir Geschichte"

Der islamisch-konservative Premier sprach bei der Grundsteinlegung für eine neue Autobahnbrücke über den Bosphorus in Istanbul, die am Jahrestag der Eroberung von Byzanz (Konstantinopel) am 29. Mai 1453 stattfand.

"Auch heute schreiben wir Geschichte", sagte Erdogan in Anspielung auf den Bau der Brücke, der dritten Verbindung zwischen Asien und Europa in Istanbul. Die Istanbul Behörden begehen den Jahrestag des Sieges über Byzantiner traditionell mit Feierstunden und Festveranstaltungen.

STARTSCHUSS FÜR DRITTE BOSPORUS-BRÜCKE

Die türkische Regierung hat den Startschuss für den Bau einer dritten Brücke zwischen Europa und Asien gegeben. Das Bauwerk soll den Bosphorus auf 1275 Metern Länge überspannen und Ende 2015 in Betrieb genommen werden. Die Brücke werde nach Yavuz Sultan Selim benannt, hiess es.

Ministerpräsident Recep Tayyip Erdogan sagte anlässlich des Baubeginns, am 560. Jahrestag der Eroberung Istanbuls, schreibe man nun ein neues Kapitel der Geschichte und beginne mit einem gigantischen Projekt.

Am 29. Mai 1453 hatte Sultan Mehmet II. mit seinen Truppen Konstantinopel erobert und damit endgültig den Untergang des Byzantinischen Reichs besiegelt. Das Datum als Baubeginn ist nicht unumstritten.

Don't use our son's death as an excuse to attack others, says family of Lee Rigby

Family and colleagues of Drummer Lee Rigby have distanced themselves from "extremist" groups using his brutal murder as an excuse to commit violence and make political gains. The condemnation comes as a blow to groups planning to hold a series of marches across the country tomorrow.

The English Defence League and the British National Party have both planned nearly 60 different demonstrations across Britain and anti-fascists have vowed to oppose them. Unite Against Fascism and Hope Not Hate both told The Independent they would be in London to counter demonstrations by the two groups, while large EDL marches are also expected in Leeds and Manchester.

• El Alfa y la Omega: La Caída de Constantinopla

La caída de Constantinopla causó una gran conmoción en Occidente, y se pensaba que era el principio del fin del cristianismo. Se llegaron a iniciar conversaciones para formar una nueva cruzada que liberase Constantinopla del yugo turco, pero ninguna nación pudo ceder tropas en aquel tiempo. Los mismos genoveses se apresuraron a presentar sus respetos al Sultán y así pudieron mantener sus negocios en Pera por algún tiempo. Con Constantinopla, y por ende el Bósforo, bajo dominio musulmán, el comercio entre Europa y Asia declinó súbitamente. Ni por tierra ni por mar los mercaderes cristianos conseguirían pasaje para las rutas que llevaban a la India y a China, de donde provenían las especias usadas para conservar los alimentos, además de artículos de lujo, y hacia donde se destinaban sus mercancías más valiosas. De esta manera, las naciones europeas iniciaron proyectos para el establecimiento de rutas comerciales alternativas. Portugueses y castellanos aprovecharon su posición geográfica junto al océano Atlántico para tratar de llegar a la India por mar. Los portugueses trataron de llegar a Asia circunnavegando África, intento que culminó con el viaje de Vasco da Gama entre 1497-1498. En cuanto a Castilla, los Reyes Católicos financiaron la expedición del navegante Cristóbal Colón, quien veía una posibilidad de llegar a Asia por el oeste, a través del Océano Atlántico, intento que culminara en 1492 con el arribo a América, dando inicio al proceso de ocupación del Nuevo Mundo.
