'LIKE 1930s GERMANY': GREEK FAR RIGHT GAINS GROUND

By Manfred Ertel in Athens

- Nowhere else in Europe are neo-Nazis and right-wing extremists profiting as greatly from the financial crisis as in Athens. As they terrorize the country with violence, the police stand back and prosecutors are powerless.

The Municipal Theater in Piraeus, Greece, was bathed in an eerie light, with yellow floodlights and red torches combining to illuminate the theater's neoclassical façade, which now served as the backdrop for a macabre spectacle: At least 1,000 neo-Nazis and their supporters had turned out for a march, and red flags bearing a large, black swastika-like symbol flew from the building's front steps.

The right-wing extremist party Chrysi Avgi, or Golden Dawn...

LAVROV: EUROPE'S NEO-NAZI REVIVAL WORRIES RUSSIA

With economic turmoil and extreme-right political parties on the rise, Moscow has expressed its concern that factions inside of some European countries are attempting to revive and glorify the Nazi ideology.

Russia, which experienced tremendous pain and devastation during World War II, says it will not tolerate the "erosion of moral standards" when reflecting on the grim history of those six long years that shook the planet.

"Russia attaches great importance to preserving the memory of millions of victims of WWII, including the Holocaust," said Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov, addressing an international conference in Moscow on Thursday entitled "Never again: the memory of the Holocaust and prevention of crimes against humanity." "The erosion of moral standards cannot be tolerated when it comes to assessing the outcomes of that war."

Attempts to rewrite the history of World War II in a way that acknowledges the rights of the hangmen alongside those of the victims, placing the occupiers alongside the liberators, are deeply immoral, he added.

Lavrov then mentioned the rise of "right-wing extremism" in some European states, where efforts are being made to transform "war criminals into heroes." This disturbing trend naturally causes "deep concerns" in Russia.

/.../ Russia lost an estimated 27 million people in World War II.

JEWISH LEADERS CALL ON EUROPE TO BAN NEO-NAZI PARTIES

Jewish leaders from around the world expressed concern Tuesday about the emergence of neo-Nazi parties in several European countries, especially in Hungary and Greece, and called on governments to consider banning them.

Parties, such as Jobbik in Hungary and Golden Dawn in Greece, promote "the toxic combination of extreme anti-Semitic discourse, aggressive national chauvinism and anti-capitalist and anti-socialist rhetoric that hallmarked the thinking and deeds of the Nazi Party," the World Jewish Congress said in a release.

/.../ German Foreign Minister Guido Westerwelle meanwhile left no doubt in a speech on Monday at the assembly about Germany categorically condemning anti-Semitism.

"We have to stand up against anti-Semitism when it comes along in a subtle way. Some people think: What do I have to do with this? That is not my business. Today it might be a Jewish neighbour, tomorrow it is yourself. This fight is about preserving our common values. It is about standing up for democracy, for individual freedom, for human rights and for human dignity," Mr. Westerwelle said.

ANTI-SEMITISM IN HUNGARY

By László Molnár

Anti-Semitism reemerged in Hungary after the transition to democracy in 1989. There is, however, a notable difference between its earlier manifestations in the 1990s and recent developments. Traditional anti-Semitism has resurfaced and received an institutional framework, while verbal and physical aggression against Jews and Roma has intensified.

One of the major representatives of this institutionalized ideology is the openly anti-Semitic, anti-Roma party Jobbik, which received 17 percent of the vote in the April 2010 national elections. Jobbik's popularity and its ties to paramilitary organizations are unique in the European Union. The Jobbik-affiliated far-right media is deeply embedded in the extremist circles and regularly presents anti-Semitic, racist, inciting content.

THE RISE OF HATE

By Nicholas Burns

- Earlier this month, neo-Nazi lawmaker Panagiotis Iliopoulos was ejected from Greece's parliament while shouts of "Heil Hitler" were heard in the chamber, in a recent incident involving his far-right party.

In Athens, a popular far-right party condemns Jews as a source of the country's misfortune and recycles the ancient lie depicting them as "Christ killers." In Hungary, the prime minister fails to disassociate himself convincingly from an anti-Semitic and increasingly powerful fascist group. Scenes from Europe in the 1930s? No. Both examples, sadly, of European politics today.

The Greek organization is Golden Dawn, now the third most popular party in the birthplace of democracy. The Hungarian party is Jobbik, which is rising in influence. Nearly 70 years after the defeat of Hitler, Mussolini, and European fascism in the Second World War, hateful, right-wing ideology has returned in nearly every European country. While none of these parties is strong enough to win power, they are often violent and aggressive. And they are intolerant of immigrants, Jews, and other minority groups that don't fit their twisted definition of what Greeks, Hungarians, and other Europeans should look like.

Golden Dawn has drawn worldwide attention for its crude bigotry, race-baiting, and use of the swastika and Nazi salute. Long an obscure cellar dweller in Greek politics, it has risen steadily in the polls as Greece's economic crisis has worsened during the past three years. In the 2012 national elections, Golden Dawn surprised by winning 7 percent of the vote and 18 seats in the Greek Parliament. It is now at over over 11 percent in recent polls. Party legislators brawled with leftists in the Greek parliament last week. Earlier this month, another Golden Dawn leader tried to punch the mayor of Athens at a charity event and, in missing, hit a 12-year-old girl instead.

During the last few months, Golden Dawn has been particularly critical of the American Jewish Committee, in part for having invited Greek Prime Minister Andonis Samaras to speak at its Global Forum in Washington next month. Golden Dawn has castigated the AJC in outrageous, derogatory language and cartoons, describing Jews as "loan sharks and tyrants of the Greek people." My friend David Harris, executive director of the AJC, describes the threat this way: "Golden Dawn does not even attempt to camouflage its ideology of hate" and "represents an insidious outlook that cannot be ignored today."

Just as the Nazis and Mussolini preyed on people's base, primal fears during the economic crises of the 1920s and '30s, Golden Dawn targets poorer Greeks living in desperate times, with youth unemployment nearing 50 percent.

If not taking Hitler seriously soon enough was a great mistake of democratic leaders in the 1930s, how should Europe and the United States react today? Some find laughable a party that glorifies Nazis in the 21st century. But that is a naïve reaction given the anger, prejudice, and hatred that fuel many European fascist movements. It would be a serious mistake to assume they are all harmless far-right crackpots.

The battle to roll back Europe's neo-fascists begins with Europeans themselves. Just last week, a Council of Europe official suggested Greece ban Golden Dawn from Greek political life.

Europe's most senior leaders, such as Germany's Angela Merkel and France's Francois Hollande, have a special responsibility to lead the charge. They can start by ostracizing Hungary's mercurial prime minister, Viktor Orban, should he not condemn the Jobbik party in plain and unmistakable terms.

Americans, too, need to speak up. Our greatest achievement is construction of a society based on openness, diversity, tolerance, and freedom. In addition to guarding against our own far-right groups, we should continue to condemn fascist groups like Golden Dawn. We can also reaffirm our democratic links with the old continent. For all the talk about the pivot to Asia, Europe still ranks as our most important economic partner and most loyal ally in NATO.

President Obama's call for an ambitious new free trade and investment agreement with Europe can revitalize the trans-Atlantic alliance and strengthen European democracy in the process.

We share with Europe the deepest historical, social, and political connections, which go all the way back to the European discovery of America itself. We're now called upon to defend them against a shameful ideology assaulting all that Europe has achieved since the close of World War II.

Nicholas Burns is a professor of the practice of diplomacy and international politics at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

U svom prvom izveštaju objavljenom prošle godine evropska policija Europol je kao najveću terorističku pretnju regionu navela radikalne islamiste. Medjutim, ova agencija je tada takodje navela listu napada koje su u poslednjih nekoliko godina izveli ekstremni desničari.

U Madjarskoj, su se desila tri bombaška napada tokom 2009., nakon toga ubistva nekoliko Roma 2009. godine. U Francuskoj, šest ljudi je uhapšeno zbog aktivnosti povezanih sa ekstremnim desničarima u Nemačkoj. Veoma sam iznenađen da u Srbiji postoje neonacisti. Za zemlju koja je propatila zbog njih i u kojoj je Hitler ubio toliko Srba, ovo je veliko iznenađenje. Treba ih zakonom zabraniti i strpati u zatvor! Srbija je dobro postupila što je zabranila okupljanje neonacista iako će Srbe, verovatno, Nemačka i Francuska ponovo nazvati ugnjetanima.

Nacizam će ostati u Evropi ukoliko se ne uradi nešto ozbiljno povodom toga. Ne razumem zašto je tako mnogo Slavena među neonacistima, s obzirom na to da je Hitler Slavene smatrao nižom rasom.

Kakva sramota! Jevrejske grupe i nevladine organizacije su morale da protestuju da bi se zabranio marš!
Svaka razumna vlada bi to sama odmah učinila.
